Detroit, Oct. 15.—The seventh and decisive game of the great world's championship series between Pittsburg and Detroit will be played here to-morrow, weather permitting. From the prosent indications the weather conditions for tomorrow, will be the seventh of the conditions for tomorrow. tions for tomorrow will be the worst of the series. Tonight it is raining and almost snowing, with high winds, and the thermometer hovering about the freezing point. A continuance of the same fort of weather is expected and if the game is played it will prob-baly be under conditions which will prevent good baseball by either team.

Wild Rush for Seats. Despite the untoward weather conditions it is freely predicted that if the game is played tomorrow it will be witnessed by the largest crowd that ever raw a game in this city. The reserved sents were put on sale at Bennett park today, and a wild rush ensued.

Mullin vs. Adams.

Under the present weather conditions the pitchers will be George Mullin for Detroit and Charles Adams for Pittsburg. Each of these twirlers has won two games in the series. Adams defeated Mullin in the opening game, but poor fielding behind the Detroit pitches contributed to the defeat, for he held contributed to the defeat, for he hele littsburg to one less hit than wa-cade by Detroit. Adams again de reated Detroit in the fifth game at Pittsburg and this time clearly outpitched Summers and Willett. Mullin has pitched three games and won two, while Adams has pitched in only two and won both.

A return match is to be rolled in this city on Tuesday, the 26th, when the rollers from the Rose alleys will expect to more than even up for this defeat.

Murphy was the only man of the Norwich quintette who performed up to form, and his best single of 107 and three string of 302 were the top scores for the evening. Such reliable pin splitters as made up the rest of the Norwich team all fell down and got less than 250 total apiece, so that it wasn't much of a job for New London to win out, taking the first and last strings.

New London rolled in good average form as will be shown by the following scores:

Chance to Pick Favorite Batsman of the Major League.

There seems to be a great difference of opinion throughout the country among baseball fans as to which of these men—Wagner or Cobb—should be considered the best ball player in the country. Since they do not play the same positions and are as different as any two men could possibly be in mental makeup and general baseball form, the only way to judge them is by consulting their records, says Frank L. Dickinson in the New York Herald.

greater than Cobb's.

In the days of ancient Greeks Cobb would have been an ideal representative of the Athenian athlete, while Wagner would have been the personification of the Spartan. Comparative Position at the Plate.

Comparative Position at the plate is a masterpiece of good form. He stands with his feet about six inches apart, with his feet about six inches apart, itis weight resting mostly on the back leg, ready to step in any direction that he may desire. Wagner assumes an awkward, ungainly position at the plate, with feet far spart, knees slightly bent, and in a half crouch depending mostly upon the wonderful strength of his forearms and shoulders to drive the ball.

Cobb grasps the bat about six inches from the handle, with hands varying from four to six inches apart. In this way he gots better control of the bat for his quick, decisive chops, and at the same time he can watch balls close to him before starting his swing.
Wagner varies the position of his hands, sometimes swinging from the extreme end, at other times choking

The play been made and while the bulk is being placed at even money. Detroit has been made an 8 and 9 to 10 favorite in many of the bets.

The Detroit supporters are betting heavily on their team and are confident Mullin will be able to perform the remarkable feat of pitching four games in a seven game series and winning to come here found out that they would be been a seven game series and winning to come here found out that they would be been to come here found out that they would be been to stepping into the ball.

RECOVERY CONTINUES.

The Academy same for this afternoon with Storrs is off, but the second transmission. Wagner, on the other hand, does not step far, depending more upon the marvelous muscular development of his forearms and shoulders to drive the ball. He switches his weight from the back foot to the front more through power developed by his abdominal muscular developed by his abdominated by his abdominated by his abdominated by good bunter and also a clever left field hitter, he keeps the third basemen guessing all the time, too.

Base Running.

As base runners both Cobb and Wagner are wonders. Each one studies the peculiarities of the pitcher's delivery and starts at the psychological moment, but Cobb, having more speed and a perfect slide, gets to the base quicker and is harder to touch. Being naturally fearless and keeping in mind always the position of the ball—sliding in front of a high throw, sliding behind on a low ball and going in straight on a perfect throw—he sometimes spikes the base—man but only when the base-man but only when the base-man is man, but only when the baseman is on the base line and blocking the play.

Wagner, on the other hand, has a longer stride and a wonderfully attended slide, but cannot get his huge body away from the plays as can Cobb.

Choosing the ball to go on when he latter, who can belp him out, are in-disputable assets in base running upon which both Cobb and Wagner depend to a large extent.

Fielding,

In comparing the ability of Cobb and Wagner, the batting and base running honors are easily Cobb's. It is an established fact that shortstop is a much harder position to fill then right field, and consequently Wagner gets the choice when it comes to fielding.
